Back to Blackthorne: Clavell's 'Shogun' makes a big TV resurgence

Why not travel to the eastern coast of Asia and hop a boat to Japan this spring? As post-pandemic tourism in the country continues to rise, so, too, does popular interest in the culture's rich traditions and history. In 2023, Japan saw nearly 25 million visitors — which accounts for a more than 161% jump in tourism in a single year, as a mere 3.83 million visitors were reported in 2022.

But for those who may not be able to travel internationally this year, perhaps a trip back in time would suit equally well. "Shogun," the newest adaptation of James Clavell's popular historical fiction novel of the same name, takes viewers back to 17th-century Japan by way of the magic of television. Don't miss your chance to get in on the action: "Shogun" has its two-episode premiere Tuesday, Feb. 27, on FX and Hulu.

As a bestselling novel, Clavell's "Shogun" achieved high praise from critics as well as readers, while annual sales of the book averaged approximately one million copies for more than a decade and a half (from its 1975 publication to 1990). Now, nearly half a century after the novel's publication, "Shogun" makes yet another resurgence; not dissimilar to its growth in popularity following NBC's three-time Emmy-winning 1980 miniseries of the same name, starring Richard Chamberlain ("The Count of Monte Cristo," 1975) in the role of Pilot Major John Blackthorne.

Taking on the role of Blackthorne in the FX series is British-American actor, musician and filmmaker Cosmo Jarvis, largely known for his roles in period pieces such as "Persuasion" (2022), "Lady Macbeth" (2016) and "Peaky Blinders." And while much of the plot does center on Blackthorne, the entirety of the largely-Japanese cast is instrumental in bringing the end of the Sengoku period to life more than 400 years after its decline.

According to FX, this new adaptation of "Shogun," like its predecessors, "is set in Japan in the year 1600 at the dawn of a century-defining civil war."

"When a mysterious European ship is found marooned in a nearby fishing village, its English pilot, John Blackthorne (Jarvis), comes bearing secrets that could help [Lord Yoshii] Toranaga [Hiroyuki Sanada, "47 Ronin," 2003] tip the scales of power and devastate the formidable influence of Blackthorne's own enemies — the Jesuit priests and Portuguese merchants," the official synopsis reads. "Toranaga's and Blackthorne's fates become inextricably tied to their translator, Toda Mariko [Anna Sawai, "Pachinko"], a mysterious Christian noblewoman and the last of a disgraced line."

FX also noted that the series, which will span 10 episodes from its double premiere to the finale, boasts an "acclaimed Japanese cast" that is "unprecedented for an American production."

Joining Jarvis, Sanada and Sawai among the cast are Tadanobu Asano ("Thor," 2011) as Kashigi Yabushige, an untrustworthy ally of Toranaga's; Hiroto Kanai ("Shomonai bokura no renai-ron") as Kashigi Omi, head of the fishing village where Blackthorne's ship washes up; Takehiro Hira ("Monarch: Legacy of Monsters") as Ishido Kazunari, Lord Toranaga's main rival; Tokuma Nishioka ("Godzilla vs. King Ghidorah," 1991) as Toda Hiromatsu, Toranaga's best general and closest friend; Yuki Kura ("Followers") as Yoshii Nagakado, Toranaga's stubborn and all-too-eager son; Shinnosuke Abe ("13 Assassins," 2010) as Mariko's jealous husband, Buntaro (a.k.a. Toda Hirokatsu); Moeka Hoshi ("On the Street," 2019) as the widow Usami Fuji, "who must find new purpose amidst her lord's fight" (per FX); and Fumi Nikaido ("Himizu," 2011) as Ochiba no Kata, mother of the shogunate's rightful heir and another of Toranaga's rivals.

Yuka Kouri ("September 1923," 2023), meanwhile, stars as the popular courtesan Kiku, while Hiro-moto Ida ("Midway," 2019) stars as Kiyama ukon Sadanaga. Yuki Kedoin ("The Manga Master," 2019) portrays Takemaru and Tommy Bastow ("The Crossing") takes on the role of Father Martin Alvito, a Portuguese priest skilled in translation and filled with compassion.

Canadian actor Kengo Hashimoto ("Monarch: Legacy of Monsters") as well as new talent Jaden Konishi and Eushin Lee (the former of whom is also Canadian) star as three of the main characters' koshos — attendants to the wealthy Japanese upper class.

An FX Productions original series, "Shogun" joins the company's catalog alongside other period dramas such as "Great Expectations," "Mrs. America" and both seasons (to date) of the Ryan Murphy anthology series "Feud." Created by new talent Rachel Kondo and her executive producing partner Justin Marks ("Counterpart"), the latter of whom also serves as showrunner, the limited series is scheduled to air its finale April 23.

Don't miss the two first episodes of the drama billed as "an epic saga of war, passion and power set in feudal Japan." "Shogun" premieres Tuesday, Feb. 27, on FX and Hulu.

'The Food That Built America' returns with tasty new episodes

You thought you knew what you were eating — but do you really? Hear the stories behind classic, American delicacies like Ben & Jerry's Ice Cream, birthday cakes and more, as "The Food That Built America" returns with its fifth season, premiering Sunday, Feb. 25, on History Channel.

Narrated by Campbell Scott ("Big Night," 1996) and with frequent presenters, including Adam Richman ("Man v. Food"), this mouthwatering docuseries uses each episode to delve into the development of popular types of food, cuisine or iconic restaurants in the U.S., all of which had major impacts on culture that continue even today.

"Many people know the products, but few know the stories of everlasting grit and determination that made these names the household brands that America knows and loves," a series news release describes.

As the series explores the lives of those who would go on to revolutionize the world of American food, it highlights not only the business and culinary acumen needed for products to succeed, but also highlights the importance of creativity and innovation in the field, walking viewers through "trials, triumphs and tribulations," according to A&E. Not to mention:

"Viewers will also receive contributing insights and expert commentary from celebrity chefs, food writers and successful entrepreneurs."

A&E goes on to promise that this upcoming season — the series' fifth — "will satisfy viewers' appetites with all new origin stories about America's most iconic food empires and the pioneers who created them. Featuring well-known brand names such as Ben & Jerry's, Charms, Tootsie Roll, Duncan Hines, Betty Crocker and many more, this season will educate viewers about the surprising stories of the sometimes ruthless visionaries and entrepreneurs who launched some of the biggest, most lucrative food brands in American history."

Before dissecting any corporate rivalries, however, the season kicks off with a tasty deep-dive into a kitchen staple: marinara. Aptly named "All American Marinara," the episode turns our clocks (and our kitchen timers) back 60 years, when the giant food corporation, Campbell, kick-started a campaign to make the good, red sauce an American food staple.

Sure to fascinate, delight and get your stomach grumbling, Season 5 of "The Food That Built America" premieres Sunday, Feb. 25, on History Channel.

BEST JAMES GARNER PROJECTS

James Garner as seen in "The Great Escape"

"Maverick" (1957-62): Though he left the popular, often-lighthearted Western series early over a contract dispute (not the only one he'd have in his career), Garner became a star as gambler and ladies' man Bret Maverick.

"The Great Escape" (1963): In this all-time-great adventure movie, based on a true story, Garner plays one of the Allied prisoners plotting a getaway from a World War II camp.

"The Thrill of It All" (1963): Easily one of Garner's best romantic comedies, this film casts him as a doctor perplexed by his wife's (Doris Day) sudden stardom in soap commercials.

"The Americanization of Emily" (1964): This romantic wartime comedy-drama, teaming him up with Julie Andrews in a Paddy Chayefsky screenplay, was cited by Garner as his favorite of his films.

"36 Hours" (1964): This clever World War II drama casts Garner as an imprisoned officer whose captors try to convince him the war is over, to get him to give up vital information.

"Duel at Diablo" (1966): Director Ralph Nelson's terrifically gritty Western features Garner as a former frontier scout who combines a personal revenge mission with his search for a runaway wife (Bibi Andersson).

"Grand Prix" (1966): Director John Frankenheimer's drama, which uses exciting driver's point-of-view and split-screen techniques plentifully, sees Garner lead an all-star cast as a veteran of the international racing circuit. The film will be shown Wednesday, Feb. 28, as part of a Turner Classic Movies "31 Days of Oscar" day devoted to Best Sound nominees and winners (this picture won that category).

"Hour of the Gun" (1967): Garner makes a fine Wyatt Earp in this mature Western that reunited him with "The Great Escape" director John Sturges.

"Support Your Local Sheriff!" (1969): After making several serious Westerns, Garner spoofed the genre in this comedy about an unlikely lawman who grows into the job.

Q: On the recent Critics' Choice Awards, was Ariana DeBose truly as upset as she looked that she was referred to as one of several actors who thought they were singers? – Julie Hart, via e-mail

Ariana DeBose had a Choice reaction

A: In a later social-media post, she said that she didn't find that comment embedded in a presenter's introduction — which also referenced Jack Black and Ryan Gosling the same way — very amusing. That's quite understandable, given DeBose's considerable stage work in musicals (including “Hamilton” and “Summer: The Donna Summer Musical”), and certainly her Oscar-winning performance as Anita in the Steven Spielberg-directed 2021 version of “West Side Story.”

Frankly, anyone who has seen DeBose's hosting stints on the Tony Awards, or her work on Apple TV+'s “Schmigadoon!,” would be hard-pressed to deny her musical abilities, so we were as confounded by the Critics' Choice Awards remark as she was. We have every confidence she'll get the last laugh with some future project, and very likely more than one, with reviews at that time sure to reference and dismiss that Critics' Choice jab at that time.

Q: I have a copy of the TV-movie “Us” with Michael Landon, and I was informed that a complete season of it was made but has never been aired. I am wondering why this first and only first season has sat on the network's shelf for all these years. — Joseph Brill, via e-mail

A: Very simply, you were misinformed. Only that pilot episode for “Us” was made, since Landon's cancer battle was diagnosed soon after that was filmed and precluded him from doing the full series. He died at the start of July 1991, and CBS aired the “Us” pilot the following September in tribute to him. Also in the cast was Barney Martin, who played Liza Minnelli's father in the 1981 movie “Arthur,” and later would appear as Jerry's dad in “Seinfeld.”
